Introduction:

In 2005, Government of Bangladesh, UNDP and (DFID) launched the first phase of the Police Reform Programme which aims at improving the efficiency and effectiveness of the Bangladesh Police by supporting key areas of access to justice; including investigations, police operations and prosecutions; human resource management and training; and strategic capacity and oversight. The overall purpose is to develop a safer and more secure environment based on respect for human rights and equitable access to justice through police reform, transforming it from a colonial government order model to a public service, which is responsive to population of Bangladesh ...the poor, vulnerable, women, and children.

Today's increasingly competitive world means a highly motivated workforce for achieving good results. Accordingly there is a need of learning how to motivate others has become an essential skill for managers. Staffs are more contributing & willing to know what is going on, they want to be consulted and they want to be involved. They want to feel that whatever they do it has some real worth and they preferably want it to have an element of enjoyment, certainly of satisfaction. When people are content in these kinds of ways they will perform well.

BRIDDHI conducted customaries teambuilding activities for UNDP (Police Reform Programme) which was highly interactive program and the objectives were to choose, build, maintain and lead teams at work and to build Leadership qualities. The course was designed to enhance participants' abilities to create and manage high quality team and professional relationships with others—whether those others are colleagues, coworkers, bosses, or stakeholders. Focus on bondage & team growth.
